With Windows 11, the company took it to a level further with multiple abstract wallpapers. Microsoft also packed 6 themes in the operating system, including some really cool dark themes. Where are the desktop wallpapers located in Windows 11? The folder is sort of hidden, it is not located in the Pictures folder like common sense would have you believe. Instead, you can find the Windows 11 wallpapers in the following directory: C:\Windows\Web\ ADVERTISEMENT Tip: Windows 10 users can find the wallpapers in the same folder, read about it here. There are four sub-folders in this directory, and every one of these contains a few pictures in various sizes and resolutions. The primary wallpaper, which is called Bloom (it was inspired by flowers), and its dark mode variant are placed in the following folder: C:\Windows\Web\4K\Wallpaper\Windows You can read about the Bloom design on Microsoft's blog. ADVERTISEMENT The Touch Keyboard directory is home to even more colorful abstract backdrops. The C:\Windows\Web\Wallpaper is sort of a mixed bag and contains several images, some of which are Nature-themed ones, if that tickles your fancy. There are a couple of image sets with different colored versions of the same wallpaper, you can set the operating system to switch between them by enabling the slideshow option. But I should warn you, toggling the setting can have an adverse result in that it can cause screen flickering issues. Tip: If you have a laptop or an OEM desktop that included Windows 10 or 11, the manufacturer's default wallpaper can be found in the C:\Windows\Web\Wallpaper directory. What is the big deal about the Windows 11 wallpapers folder? Why is this important? ADVERTISEMENT Windows 11 only lists the 5 recent backgrounds that you used in the Settings > Personalization screen. So, if you changed wallpapers several times, the Settings app will not display the default backgrounds of the operating system. You will need to browse for them manually, and the folder is not exactly easy to find if you didn't already know about it. That being said, there is a simple way to restore the default backgrounds. All you have to do is to change the theme, and you will get its corresponding image set as your desktop background. As I mentioned earlier, Windows 11 comes with 6 themes, each of which has its own wallpaper. But keep in mind that there are more backdrops available in the wallpapers folders, so you actually get some extra customization options. By manually changing the wallpaper, you can mix and match the images (including the hidden ones), with the built-in themes of your choice, to keep things fresh. If you don't have Windows 11 on your computer but want the wallpapers from it, head over to our previous coverage to download them. Do you like Bing Wallpapers? You can have your desktop wallpaper refreshed everyday with the official Bing Wallpapers app from Microsoft, or the third-party program, Bingsnap. If you have an Android phone, you can use a combination of the Muzei Live Wallpaper app, and the Bing Image of the Day add-on, to get a new home screen image everyday. Do you like Windows 11's wallpapers? Which one is your favorite? ADVERTISEMENT Summary Advertisement Wallpapers are the most basic customization an operating system can allow. Even iOS allows changing wallpapers, that's how basic it is. On a Windows 10 device, Wallpapers are pretty much the only thing you can change in terms of how things look, apart from the accent color. Of course, is you're willing to risk it you can change a whole lot more than just wallpapers and accent colors. I don't know about you but I change my wallpapers quite frequently. If you're the same, you might be a struggle to find new wallpapers as often. Here are 5 wallpaper apps for Windows 10 that'll fulfill all your wallpaper needs, hopefully. Wallpapers will help you customize your desktop but if you want to customize the taskbar too, here are some cool Windows 10 taskbar tips and tricks that you should try. 1. 9Zen Wallpaper Changer 9Zen Wallpaper Changer, previously known as Brilli Wallpaper Changer, is arguably the most feature-rich wallpaper app available on the Microsoft Store. Most apps offer wallpaper from a single source such as Bing, or Unsplash. 9Zen offers you wallpapers from various sources, including Bing. You can set a region for Bing daily images and also set them as your desktop and lock screen wallpaper so that you have a new wallpaper every day. You can also create a collection of your favorite wallpapers, change the time interval at which wallpapers change, etc. It's a free app but it is ad-supported and only allows 2 collections each with 30 wallpapers. If you want more you'll need to buy the full version for at least $2.99. 2. Dinamic Wallpaper for Windows 10 Like 9Zen, Dinamic Wallpaper brings you wallpapers from a variety of different sources which include Bing, 500px Pulse, 500px Macro and NASA Astronomy. You can also add your own local collection to the app. Also, like 9Zen, it allows you to select your region for the Bing Daily wallpaper. The app automatically changes your desktop and/or lockscreen wallpaper but you cannot select an interval manually. It can also automatically download and save an applied wallpaper to your PC. The app is free, mostly, but you'll have to pay for access to some parts of it. Before you proceed to the next wallpaper app, here is how you can hide files and folders on your Windows 10 PC. 3. Dynamic Theme Wallpaper App Dynamic Theme is a must-have Windows 10 app especially if you frequently change wallpapers. Even though the name suggests it changes more than just Wallpapers, it doesn't. The app is free though and mimics the Windows 10 interface quite nicely. It feels like a built-in app and a part of the OS instead of a third-party app. You can set the app to change your desktop and/or lockscreen wallpaper to a single Bing or Windows Spotlight image. You can also set it to change your wallpaper automatically with new Bing and Windows Spotlight images. There's not much to the app outside of these two sources. You can set a region for Bing, preview both Bing and Windows Spotlight images before applying, automatically save them to your PC and also set a time interval. 4. Wallpaper Studio 10 If you've used wallpaper apps on Android, you were probably expecting an app with a huge collection of wallpapers neatly put into categories. So far we haven't given you that but Wallpaper Studio 10 is an app of that kind. It offers wallpapers in various categories like abstract, car, funny, life, nature, quotes, sports, etc. There are thousands of wallpapers to choose from and you can also have the app automatically change your desktop and/or lockscreen wallpapers at set intervals. The app brings you a great community and you can also upload your own wallpapers to share with the world. The downside is the intrusive and annoying ads but you can get rid of them for $1.35. This is one of the best wallpaper apps for Windows 10 that you can enjoy now. 5. Splash! – Unsplash Wallpaper App Splash! – Unsplash Wallpaper is an unofficial Unsplash client for Windows 10. For those unaware, Unsplash is an increasingly popular source of high-quality images that users have started using as wallpapers, hence the increasing popularity. Splash!, as you can now guess, offers you these high-quality images as wallpapers without having to browse through the website. The app is extremely simple to use and you can get started right away once it is installed. When you launch it, your desktop wallpaper changes automatically. By default, the app will keep changing your desktop wallpaper at 1-hour intervals but you can change that and more in the settings. You can also simply click on the app to switch to the next wallpaper and there's an endless supply of those. The wallpapers are automatically saved to your PC as well. If you want to change the dark and light themes on your Windows 10 computer on a scheduled time, you can do that with Auto Night Mode. A user-friendly and secure ad-free browser Use Whatsapp from your Desktop Tencent Chat with all your Telegram contacts from your desktop Create boot disks from an external drive Download the latest Windows 10 ISO on your computer Survive to the end in this fun clone of Fall Guys Automatically switching wallpapers is probably the best way to keep your desktop fresh and full of surprises. I personally have a great collection of beautiful wallpapers and like them to keep switching on my screen. So, whether you are a desktop wallpaper fanatic or just want to change up your computer's screen, like me, I can show you 3 ways to automatically change wallpapers in Windows 10. Let's have a look. How to Customized Windows 10 Method #1 – Windows 10 Native Windows has a built-in slideshow feature that can automatically change your wallpaper after a set interval. This feature only works with your own collection of wallpapers so the wallpapers must be downloaded first. Below is a step-by-step explanation on how to use this feature: Windows 10 only accepts a single folder containing wallpapers. So first, put all your favorite wallpapers in a single folder. Now move to Windows Settings > Personalize > Background. Here click on the drop-down menu below Background and select Slideshow. Click on the Browse button below and select the wallpaper collection folder you created. To set the interval, click on the drop-down menu below the Change picture every heading and select the required interval (ranging from 1 minute to 1 day). That's it, now your desktop screen will automatically switch to a new wallpaper after the set interval. Method #2 – Using third-party apps You can also use a dedicated third-party app that can both download and change your wallpaper automatically. Below I have listed two of the best tools for this purpose that are also free: 1. John's Background Switcher (JBS) JBS is my first choice for its no-nonsense interface and working. To get you started, it has some default sets that don't require any setup. You just select the set, and mesmerizing wallpapers start appearing. If you want to create your own sources for downloading wallpapers, then you can set wallpapers from Instagram, Flickr, Facebook, SmugMug Photos, Vladstudio, Pixabay, and a few others. You can also include your own wallpaper collection, along with these resources. There is also an option to add any media RSS, basically allowing you to get wallpapers from any image websites, such as DeviantArt or Behance. Interestingly, each resource has further options to get the required wallpapers, that I must say are very customizable. For example, from Flickr, you can get images based on time period, tag, keyword, person, group, and even your own Flickr photos. I also really like its picture mode option that gives you full control over how you want the wallpaper to be applied. You can crop and fit, stretch, scale, and even get collages and montages using multiple images. For changing pictures, you can select the interval from 10 seconds to 7 days. And best of all, it has support for dual monitors with dedicated options to charm your dual monitor setup. Pros Easy to use. Supports reliable sources along with RSS support. Dual monitor support. Default preset to get you started. Cons Simple, but limited in features. 2. BioniX When it comes to features and customizability, BioniX is decades ahead of JBS. However, in my experience, it's a bit difficult to use and will work probably best in the hands of an advanced user. The interface is a bit clunky and overwhelming, to the point I might just say "it's not user-friendly". I actually had to spend a few hours just to understand the tool and start adding wallpaper sources. If you can deal with the interface, then it's the most robust tool for manage desktop wallpapers. For wallpaper sources, you can either use Flickr Mass Downloader to download wallpapers from Flickr, or manually enter URLs of web pages from where you want to download images. This approach does offer more control over what exactly you want, but it's also a cumbersome task. To list a few of its unique features, you can add effects to all wallpapers, get day/night wallpapers based on time, get dynamic webcam wallpapers, dedicated shortcuts, automatic categorization, filter to reject bad wallpapers (low resolution), and much more. Pros Astonishingly customizable. Can add images from any website on the web. Day/night to show light or dark wallpapers at the respective time. Automatically rejects bad wallpapers. Get images from public webcams. Cons The interface is a bit difficult to use. Adding wallpapers sources requires more manual intervention. For both the above tools, dedicated pause and play buttons are available to start and pause wallpaper switching. Once you add the required resources, use these buttons to control the wallpapers. Method #3 – Using Bing Bing is known for its Daily Background Image that replaces its homepage with a new wallpaper every day. Many people only visit Bing to see its daily wallpaper, and I am sure you'll agree that they are amazing. If you find Bing background images beautiful, then you can get them on your PC as well. Using the Bing Wallpaper, you can change your wallpaper with latest Bing Daily Background Image as soon as it is updated. Download the Bing desktop app and install it. At the end of the installation, check the check box next to Make the Bing homepage your desktop background. You may check or uncheck other provided options as you please. That's it, after a few seconds your desktop wallpaper will be changed with Bing's Daily Background Image. Ubuntu Desktop Wallpapers To sum it up These three methods should be enough to keep your desktop fresh. I should mention that frequently changing wallpapers will affect the battery timing of your laptop. If you have a low battery, then it's better to disable automatic wallpaper changing or slow it down at least. Furthermore, if you are using a 'download and apply' wallpapers service, then your network data will be used and it may even slow down other network activities while downloading images. Don't forget to let me know which method did you find the best, in the comments section below.
